RECEIVED FROM THE SPIRITUAL RAPPERS. (N. B .- Nobody accountable for the measure!) A LETTER FROM THE LATE GENERAL TAYLOR TO THE VERY-MUCH-TOO-LATE GENRAL SCOTT.

ly very dear and much-loved General Scott, l congratulate you on your happy lot, In having missed, in Presidential question, The wretched fate of a political election.

I tried it once, and know full well its trials:

If all the wrath contained in all the phials of all the gods were dashed upon your head, Twere bliss, to being by nose and party led! Soldiers are we, admitted henest, brave—
Better that repute come with you to the grave—
Shoulder your crutches, when the day is done,
And show your youngsters how the fights were won, Where every half-bred lawyer, sir, could hit you With "gibes and jests," and satires critical, At lack of statesman's knowledge and political. Statesmen are not, we know, by intuition made— Like soldiers, General, they must learn their trade. We learned ours on the well-fought field, And taught our friends to know " we never yield !" Stick to the shop, old boy !—I wish I'd done it! My short reign was over ere I'd searce begun it. Short as it was, I learned this obvious truth, That I was something older than in youth. The cares of office shattered my old frame-I left my country but my soldier's name. Do you, dear General, leave the same bequest— Put off your hat and feathers, and come to rest! POSTSCRIPT.

A correspondent of the New-York Herald, writing from Concord, New Hampshire, thus describes the personal appearance of the President elect : "I have had the pleasure of several little interviews. with General Pierce. He is a man of mark, a man of education, a man of accomplishments in the ways of the world; a shrewd politician, and of broad and comprehensive views as a statesman. His face is expressive and genial and intelligent. He is affable and pleasing in his manners, modest and unpresuming, vet cool and self-possessed in a remarkable degree. He evidently feels that he has not yet been tried to the With lectures on all the higher branches. . 16 00 measure of his capacities; and, what is better, he has the power involuntarily of convincing you of the fact. ently, and correctly : but he keeps his own counsels most vigorous constitution. His complexion, too, is pale, and his face thin, excepting the extraordinary expansion of his lower jaw; but he is one of that wirey, active class of men, all muscle and nerve, and capable of all sorts of hardships and endurance. Fremont, who has sustained the most incredible trials of starvation, and cold, and snow, in the depth of winter. among the inhospitable peaks and dreary defiles of the Rocky mountains, and the Sierra Neveda, is one of the same sort-spare and delicate, but elastic, and muscular, and tough, and hardy as Kit Carson. James K. Polk, who could ride on horse-back sixty miles a day, in the middle of July, and make three or four stump speeches of a quarter of an hour each, was of the same spare construction. So was Marion; so was Napoleon in his prime; so was Wellington; so was Horatio Nelson; so was Jefferson; so was Old Hickory, and so was Harry Clay. Gen. Pierce has precedents in the greatest abundance to make a merit of being neither a Falstaff nor a Hercules."

Louis Napoleon .- The N. Y. Courier & Enquirer thinks that the world has been greatly mistaken in the character of Louis Napoleon, and that the world is beginning to find it out. In the course of its remarks, the Courier says :

"It so happened, that when in the winter of 1836 he landed in this city from Brazil, where he had been exiled by Louis Philipe, we were the first acquaintance he made in the country; and his first evening in the United States was spent at our table, in company with Gen. Scott and other guests. This circumstance was the cause of our seeing much of him while in this country; and we subsequently saw a great deal of him in London. The result of phate Zinc, Soz. Scene In a Concert Room.

Our readers are aware that Madame Soutag invited the clergy of Boston to a rehearsal, some of them making scruples about attending a full concert .-The following touching scene took place, and ex-

ed the audience to retain their seats on the conclusion of the rehearsal, when the Rev. Dr. Sharp ascended the platform, and in a most feeling and appropriate address, thanked Madame Sontag on the behalf of all present, for the gratification which had been afforded them. He reviewed the circumstances under which this in fact full concert had been given, eulogizing, in glowing terms that kindness of heart which had prompted Madame Sontag to minister to the pleasure of those who were precluded from attending on other occasions, and concluded by invoking the protection and blessing of Providence on her, and her's here, with the hope that she might be permitted to mingle her voice with the seraphs hereafter, in praise of Him who gave it. The entire audience were visibly affected by this address. There was scarcely an eye to which the unbidden tear did not rise, whilst the calm and impressive language of the Rev. Doctor fell on their ears, and his aged appearance and venerable sinplicity gave the undeniable stamp of truth to all he uttered. Madame Sontag could not restrain her emotion-her tears fell fast-and the only utterance she could find for thanks, was by taking both the Rev. Doctor's hands in her own, and for several moments retaining them, whilst bowing her head in si-

A little girl from Warren street chapel then advanced, and presented her with a boquet, bearing an inscription, whom she at once stooped and kissed -This act at once affording the audience relief, in giving vent to the applause they had been long anxious to bestow. Those to the waiting room her emotion continued, and she observed, "Oh, that good clergyman-never has my heart been so touched before. How can I thank him and all these kind friends?" And on his being introduced, she again personally expressed her feelings to him. The Rev. Mr. Barnard also announced that two Bibles-the one Protestant, the other Catholic-would be presented to Madame Sontag. and awaited the signatures of the clergy.
